Message from the Premier

It is a great pleasure to announce the 2022 Queensland Reconciliation Awards open for nomination. The Queensland Government is proud to support the Awards which celebrate partnerships between Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander and non-Indigenous Queenslanders to progress the pathway to reconciliation.

For 20 years, these Awards have honoured the many inspiring collaborations and projects advancing reconciliation in our communities, industries, workplaces, schools and businesses. Recipients of the Awards come from across the State and are making progress to promote reconciliation work across numerous industries.

They shine a light on commitments made across Queensland to celebrate Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples' culture, acknowledge our shared history and embrace the importance of working towards reconciliation. They recognise the people and organisations making a difference in our communities.

This year we are launching the Awards to coincide with Indigenous Business Month, as an opportunity to highlight the growing ranks of successful Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander businesses across Queensland,

My Government is committed to building and developing relationships with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. Every year, we are inspired by the nominations from Queenslanders, ranging from cultural awareness and truth-telling initiatives to programs keeping traditional languages and cultures strong.

In 2021, the finalists of the Queensland Reconciliation Awards included organisations improving access to health services, schools promoting Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander languages, and businesses supporting cultural capability training and employing more Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Queenslanders.

Jabalbina Yalanji Aboriginal Corporation and Rainforest 4 Foundation received my special commendation in 2021. Their partnership is the only formalised non-government program in Australia that purchases land for conservation to be owned and managed by its Traditional Owners.

In 2020, Hutchinson Builders received the Business category award for its Statim Yaga (Start Work) program which sets bold targets to increase training and employment of Indigenous jobseekers in the construction industry.

I encourage Queenslanders throughout the State – in regional and remote Queensland and our towns and cities – to nominate the projects, businesses, schools and organisations in our communities that are contributing towards a more fair and inclusive Queensland.

There is a place for all Queenslanders on our shared journey towards reconciliation.

Message from the Minister

for Seniors and Disability Services and Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Partnerships

After a year like no other, the 2022 Queensland Reconciliation Awards is a wonderful opportunity to celebrate and renew commitments to reconciliation in Queensland.

Queenslanders continue to nurture reconciliation statewide from schools and construction sites, to the corporate sector and community groups.

The Palaszczuk Government's dedication to reconciliation includes re-framing the relationship with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, by working together to enable local decision making and supporting community aspirations.

Strong government and community partnerships guide our way forward, from progressing Queensland's Path to Treaty, to achieving nation-leading legal recognition of Torres Strait Islander traditional child rearing practices.

It is also inspiring to see how more individuals, communities, workplaces and industries are willing to champion, advocate for and advance reconciliation.

Now is an opportunity for all of us to put words into action, as Queensland takes historic steps to progress a Path to Treaty towards a just, fair and inclusive future for First Nations peoples.

Our state's reconciliation journey calls for commitment and dedication from all Queenslanders.

As we witness during times of cyclones, floods and fires to the global pandemic of COVID-19, Queenslanders achieve incredible outcomes when we work together. The same can be said when it comes to reconciliation.

Reconciliation is everyone's business, and we all have an important role to play.

I look forward to receiving this year's nominations to celebrate reconciliation and further inspire efforts to ensure more Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Queenslanders and communities have opportunities to thrive.
